Mr. Wusherer has arrived here from the court of the elector of Wurtemberg. It is reported that the object of his mission is to apply to the king of Prussia to unite the states of Wurtemberg to the armed neutrality of the north, in the event of the renewal of hostilities on the continent.

Bonaparte is said to have declared, that he will not consent to any peace till Malta is restored to the knights of St. John of ferusalem, and that a bolv of French troops shall march into the Neapolitan territories, as soon as any part of the Russian troops quits the republic of the Seven Isles. An arrangement betwirt Austria & France at the expence of Switzerland, is talked of. The French charge d'affaires at Hesse Cassel, intimated that, if Mr. Taylor, the English charge d'affaires, was not dismissed from that court in ten days, he should take his departure. The ten days elapsed, and Mr. Taylor continues at Hesse Cassel.

The Danish minister, Bernstorf, has had frequent conferences with M. Hardenberg. The object of these meetings is unknown, as the projected marriage betwist the Prince of Prussia and a Princess of Demmark, is not to take place.

At the last order for recruiting the Austrian army, even the subjects of foreign powers are not spared. Several remonstrances have been made on this subject, but without producing the desired effect.

LONDON, August 22.

The Swiss officers, serving under General St. Cyr, in the kingdom of Naples, and who were lately dismissed by order of Bonaparte, were degraded because they refused to engage their men to sign a petition demanding the incorporation of their country with France. The Swiss brigades in the French service are for the future to be officered by Frenchmen, as well as the Batavina regiments, who are suspected of Anti-Galo mania.

A duel I tely took place at Wattzbourg, between the young Baron de Harf, Canon of the Cathedral, and a Bavarian Officer, of the name of Zandt, attended by very singular circumstances. Young De Harf was playing at the Hotel of Bavaria with lieutenant Prince De Lowenstein, lieutenant of light horse Zandt, and M. Kleinemberg, a native of Courland, and a student at law. In the midst of the game M. De Harf reminded lieutenant Zandt that he owed him 13 crowns: the other answered, that he had discharged the debt. De Harf persisting in his assertion, Prince De Lowenstein interfered, and said that a bullet alone could terminate the difference. They agreed to fight, and the sabre was chosen to decide the quarrel. The duel took place in the apartment of Prince Lowenstein, who had provoked it.

The two adversaries made 16 thrusts; Zandt received two slight wounds. The Prince exclaimed that it would be a shance for an officer to stop there. They resolved to continue the combat, and as the sabres were blunted, they sent for a cutler to reniw he edge. In the interval, De Hauf and Zandt assailed each other with so mamy invectives and opprobious expressions, that it was clear that they must fight until one of them was killed. At the first thirst Zandt was again wounded, but being animated by the Prince's voice, he fell to with redoubled vigor. At length at the 31st as. sault the baron De Harf received a cut from the sab e, which pierced the breast, & penetrafed into the lungs. He died the next day, after uff ring the greatest agonies. Zand has absconded as well as his second, the Prince De Lowenstein, & Kleinemberg, the second to the unfortunate Harf. The latter is related to an illustrious and respectable family on the left bank of the Rhine.

Poor Lucien Bonaparte remains in a state of exclusion from the Imperial favor of Napolean, who seems to forget all the services that Lucien ever rendered him. Those who remember the activity of Lucien in the council of Five Hundred, daring Napoleon's expedition to Egypt, and the consideration he thereby acquired in the display of considerable public talents, and the very important part he played for the usurper at the sitting of St. Cloud, where even Napoleon is said to have disclosed something like the signs of trepidation, may perhaps find some difficulty in assigning the mere fact of his marriage as a sufficient cause for the displeasure of the soi-desant emperor. It is asserted, that the conduct pursued since his elevation to the consulate by Napoleon, has been far from agreeable to Lucien, who is supposed to have something of republicanism about him. But this is hardly worth enquiry, August 30.

Amidst the many delusions which have been from time immemorial, which are at the present day, and which in all probabili. ty, ever will be practised upon the country, no one has been more successful, if we may judge by the frequent repetition of the experiment, than the attempt to persuade us, that men in power, whoever they may be, are fools and rogues; and that men out of power, whoever they may be, are sages and honest fellows. Nevertheless; one should suppose, that the experience of a man's own life, and the information that he must obtain from history, would be sufficient to convince him, that this criterion in estimating character, is not quite infallible; that there is nothing to the wand. of office which at once deprives the possessor of integrity and wisdom; and that under any administration, however illustrious for talents and virtue, there must always exist a set of men, whose interest it is, or at least, who think it is their interes, openly to depreciate what secretly they revere. These observations were suggested to us by an article, in an opposition paper of yesterday, on the rumored dissolution Italy-removing the Austrians from Corfu of parliament, in which Mr. Pitt and his friends are loaded with every opprobrious epithet, expressive of baseness and imbecility. The writer has chosen a rather unfortunate moment for this attack, or, we deat instrument of England. It does not seem probable, that he will induce the country to condemn the measures which the comprehensive mind of the Minister prompted him to pursue, at the very instant when the awakening feelings of the lities," says Bonaparte, " cannot influence great Powers on the Continent, prove the expediency of those measures. It does not seem probable, that he will induce the country to believe with him, that Mr. Piles name is indissolubly associated with the degradation of Europe and the aggrandize ment of France, because unluckely for his assertion, the country must recollect, that, under the administration of Mr. Pitt, G. Britan has uniformly, and for a long time resisted the aggressions of France; and she now-forms a rallying point for the other European nations, which, had different counsels been followed, would have been wanting to them. Unconnected as we are with any party, it must, we think, on a due and dispassionate consideration of the subject, appear the glory of Mr. Pite's life, rels, attack the empires of Constantinople that (placed as he has been in circumstances of such peculiar difficulty, that no pre edeat existed by which his agaduct could be regulated), he has hitherto steered the ves- ed on his hobby horse of Universal Emsel- of the state safely through the tempes pire, and consulting only the brilliancy of by which she was always assailed, and will, his high destinies, he considers England. we do ibt ot, convey her al imatelizate he as already a province of France. - and supported. At present we have to apimadvert upon his labors principally in the Frenchmen of the times of Louis XV. his capacity of journalist. The Moniteur and that the period when she imposed a of the 14th August (it is unnecessary to treaty of commerce upon the cabinet of remind our readers that all the sentiments set forth on public affairs in all the French newspapers are either dictated or approved by Bonaparte, or agents immediately in his confidence); contains a document, which as being of imperial origin, may be considered in many respects an article of very great importance. It may be regarded at once as a political engine, by which the usurper wishes to act upon the different cabinets of Europe, and a barom ter of his hopes, apprehensions, and fears, respecing the coalition that his arrogance and ambition have raised against France.

The sentiments to which we allude are set forth upon occasion of perusing the remarks of the English newspapers upon the return of M. Novozilizoff from Berlin. They breathe a tone of uncommon moderation, and a disposition extremely pacific, particularly towards Austria and England. To the former it is dexierously even more than once instructed, that she might effect a general pacification, upon the principle of -a separation of the crowns of France & and the Morea-and removing the English from the Mediterranean. It is attempted to pique her self love by representing her. in the event of hostilities, as the impruflattered: "Peace or war are in her hands." tion in England, and will, by these means, have the melancholy satisfaction of pro longing the anxieties and the cares of two great nations." " But this system of pohe conduct of a prince so candid and so honest as Francis II." He does a t, however, think it at all surprising, ' that the movements which Austria causes her troops to make, should induce persons in England | but every thing to apprehend from Russia; to suppose that it is her intention to coalesce against France.

A few compliments, and an indirect threat, are bestowed, en passant, on the Germanic body. A strong appeal is made to the jealousies, the interests, and the fears, which may be supposed to influence England. would see with pleasure England & France weaken themselves by a long war, in order that she might, under favor of their quarand Persia." This observation, we may remark, is very inconsistent with the language which Bonapatie holds, when mount. after having atchieved the conquest of this country, he may easily wrest Constantino. ple and Persia from the Russian empire, vertheless true. In the actual state of affairs, there can be nothing more advantageous for England, or more profitable for her commerce than a just and reasonable peace." We ought to be extremely oblig. ed to the emperor for his kindness, but he does not seem to be such an adept in occasioning commerce to flourish in his own dominions, as to deserve to be regarded as an infallible guide in this country.

Notwithstanding his now tone of moderation, his imperial majesty cannot, however, so far forget himself as wholly to abanden his favorite system of intimidation .-He does not know how little effect it can produce on the minds of freemen. "Let England be convinced" says he, " that the Frenchmen of the present day, reared up and hardened in camps are, are no longer Versailles is as far removed from us as the time when she had a commissary at Dunkirk." With all due deference to this impe, rial opinion, the Englishmen of the present day are as capable of contending against FRENCHMEN of the PRESENT day, and are as incapable of being intimidated by them, as those of any period in history, Let them only beware of being cajoled .-This from the side of France is their only danger-of winch we have a woeful example in the treaty of Amiens!

The article concludes in a very extraor. dinary manner " The Emperor very pro. perly said to the King of England, the world is large enough to contain both nations; we say more - the world is large enough for all the nations in it." This is a kind of avowal, on the part of Bonaparte, that he does not mean, at present, farther to diminish their number by ani ing them with France. He must appear moderate. at-least until he has allayed the storm which his ambition has already raised.

The whole spleen of this article is vented against the Emperor of Russia, whom it accuses (the world-will-judge how truly) of immoderate rancour against France, and of never having been sincere in promoting a peace between her and England. Its principal object seems to be to excite the jealousy of the other, powers, that are expected to form part of the coalition against the riews of Russia. Bu what will appear most singular to many ven Prussia, will join the number of her enemies; and, indeed, why should not the other powers be able to indemnify Prussia more amply than she can be benefited even by the partition of Holland, said to have been proposed by France? On the object of Prussia, the Moniteur says "The opinion of old Mollendorff, the associate of the great Frederick, is, that Prussia has nothing to fear from France, and that from principles of justice as well as policy, she ought rather to join 100,000 Prussians to 100,000 French, to defend her independence, and to ave this Power, half European and half Asiatic, which, separated from Europe by desarts, can when she pleases, so arrogantly appress all her neighbors, and withdraw "Past experience proves, that Russia herself from the effects of the tempests she may have raised." - Bonaparte accuses Alexander of arrogance!- This is truly ridiculous in the extreme.

(London paper.)

From the SALEM REGISTER. from the French papers we have been he obtain the outline of the history of esia till the commencement of the war with Russia. After the death of Nadir Car, in 1787, Persia was divided be ween wousurpers. One held Chiras as his re. test for the supreme p wer was not immefine. The Khan of Taber gave the first serious check to Dgaissar Chan of Chiras, Dgiffar was again in arms, and though he wered a great defeat by Aga Mahemet udefeated aga Mahemet in turn on the 10th August, 1788. The public wishes blowed Dgaiffar, who entered Isaphan in thumph in October of the same year. infortunately for his power, he returned whis own capital to quiet some divisions song the inhabitants, and was assassinat d Said Murad was then proclaimed fince regent, at about 40 years of age. this revolution of 1789, did not free the prince from fears of the vengeance of the lor of Daniffar or his rival still living. The son gained Chiras, the capital, and puaished the assassin, but the rival of his faler yet remained. For a time he was ble to repel this prince, but the affairs of in capital kept him at home His rival, Aga Mahamet was employing this time in faining reinforcements, with which he ushed for the capital of his enemy, & after theral bloody battles victory declared for Mahemet. Still possesion of the cawas not gained till 4 years afterwards, 11794. The son of Dgaiffar was obliged Mast to retreat with a few friends, but was put out, he was permitted to live on a pen-Idence at Chiras.

and sacked Teffis and massacred the Rus- tions: sians he found in that place. It was at this The Tailors have rendered themselves a however, supposed that the usurper from the weakness of the prince and from fear of Russia, did nothing. The Russians continued to advance, and were preparing for a new campaign. Aga Mahemet perished by the hands of one of his generals, in July, 1797, after having rene extensive confederation against dered himself odious by his cruelty and tyranny. The Persian army at Tehran, atmen of the most tempting kind have terwards proclaimed Baba Khan Serdat, called Fath Ali Chah, sovereign of Persia, in the place of his uncle. His first step to public favor was in tessening the public burdens. Another event soon contributed been supposed that Talleyrand has to the quiet possession of his power. A powerful army under Zeki, from the southly entered into some secret engage- ern provinces, was marching against his of a conditional nature, but which capital with great success, but the failure arrainly not very favorable to the views of his treasures, at the time when he had france. It is well known that great | the greatest expectations, obliged him to vents prevail in Spain, as well as in abandon his enterprize. The Russians Switzerland and Holland. But what have not abandoned the war. However all more alarming to the Usurper, Mo- justifiable the commencement of the war does not appear to be so entirely for- might have been, they persevere, though men by the French armies as Bonaparte they have not yet penetrated far, and the med to suppose; they pitty the fall and Persians have not been without advantages is the numerous engagements with their northern neighbours.

The present prince of Persia, Fath Ali

Chah, is said to be 56 years of age. He is declared to possess a fine person, and military character, but is exceedingly vothousand troops, according to the last | lup nous. He has many children, but he administers justice. Order reigns in his towns, safety is found on all his roads, and on risk a continental war, if he had | discipline live in his armies. His troops are good, but without European tactics. The success of the Whabis pave him great disquiet, after he learnt the massacre at Iman Hussein. He pur his court in mourning, and sent to the Pacha of Bagdat to reproach his neglect, and to enjoin upon him to march against them, or he would visit him after the conquest of the Whabi, by his own hand, with an army numerous as the stars in the firmament. The French say that the English, who neglect no opportunities to extend their commerce, had applied to him to obtain two establishments for the E g sh company at Bender Abana & Herat But that the English ambassador. Manesty, had not accomplished his purposes, but had promised to enquirie into the illence, and the other Isaphen. The con- nature of his request. The French say that Russians are extremely jealous of any the measures in Europe, which have Persia as their object. That in 1787, count Sauvesouth received a check from the brother bacuf went from Constantinople into Perof Iga Mahomer, of Isphan. In 1787, 1sta. He had been in Persia before, and had furnished useful information to this country. The Russian envoy at Constantinople, Bulhakow, demanded of the court whether the count had been acknowledged by the court of Versailles. M. de Choiseul Gouffier replied, that he was only a French merchant, induced by the views of private interest. But the Russian minister being dissatisfied, the French ambassador assured him that the count was not to meddle with political affairs, and that M. Simelin, the minister of Russia, at Paris, had been notified of the undertaking. The Chah had discovered that the Frenth had an agent at Trebisend, and as with the English, appeared to encourage their hopes. In '96, the Chah had no knowledge of the French revolution or of the wars in Europe, and it is affirmed that he had no knowledge of the names of the nations which inhabit Europe.

A new farce was lately brought out in London called " The Tuilors, or A Tragedy for Warm Weather." Which so incensed the Tailors of London, that they would not permit its performance. Accordingly thetwards taken and after his eves were they went in such numbers to the Hay-Market Theatre on the 13th of August, as granted to him. Aga Mahamet had I to compel the manager to substitute another entertainment for that, which it is supposed reflected upon so useful and respect-It was after the submission of the son of able a body. Upon this occasion a Longaiffar, he turned his arms against Russia, don editor makes the following observa-

"The while his iron did on his anvil cool, "With open mouth fwallowing a failor's news." Even Richard the third thought a "score or Two of l'ailors" necessary to deck out his person, when he aspired at great things. The corps of Tailors are as essential to the equipment of a company of comedians as the Theatre itself. The players therefore must take care to be more measured in their conduct, and to cut their cout according to their cloth.

Many of our readers will remember the opposition made by the knights of the rainbow, to the faree of High Life below Stairs, and the uproar some time back at Covent Garden, raised by the descendants of Moses and Solomon, is fresh in every one's memory. The Village Lawver, which was proposed to be substrened for the Devil a. mong the Tarlors, may, with other pieces, make a motion among the lawyers. If they take counsel together, they may call on the managers to shew cause why they should not give their opinion in the same way as he tailors, have done. They have better judges among them, who understand the nature of action and suits, and can make out as long bills for their services to the theatre. The Thespians talk of employing them to attack Thimble and Scissur critics: and hope they will be brief when Tailors brave the field."

Senfibility and Ferocity .- Monfieur de Ber, trand, a knight of Malia, was brought at midight, on the 3d of September, 1792, before the dressful tribumal in the prison of the Abbaye. He was a man of great coolness and firmness of mind, which was or infinite fervice to him in this emergency. When he was questioned, he antweied with an undiffurhed voice and countenance, " that he had not the teath idea of what he had been arrefted for, that these who arrested him could not inform him, that not ody had informed. hi infince, and he was convinced he had been taken up by mittake."

Stru k with the cool and unlaunted manner in which he addressed them, the ju ges ordered him to be released. Two men covered with blood, who had been employed in killing the prisoners, feemed furprif d but not displeased at the unusual ord r. They conducted him through the court of the Appaye, and on the way asked if he had any relation to wh fe house he'w shed to go. He answered, that be had a fifter in law, to whom he intended to go directly.

"" How very much furprized and delighted must the be to fee you," find they -" I am per. fusied the will," replied M Bertrand.

One of them asked the other if he should not he glad to be prefent at this meeting, to which he eagerly faid he should; a d to h dec aied that they had a curiofity to be witnesses to the joyful.

The gentleman was aftonifieds and embarraf. ed : he represented that his relation being a deli. cate woman, their appearance might very much alarm her; that he could not think of giving them

They urged they would wait in the parlor till he had advertised the lady of their being in the house, to prevent her being alarmed; that so far from being a trouble, it would give them great pleafure to accompany him, that they wished to have relaxation from the work they had been for long employed in.

M. Brira d did not think it prudent to refufe fuch petitioners any longer. They accompanied him to the house. He sent the fervaot, who opened the door at the found of his voice, to advertife the lady that he was arrived and well. He afterwards went himfelf, and informed her of the fancy of the two men. Every body in the family had flocked around him with expressions of joy. The two men were admitted, and were witnesses to the happiness that all manifested; they keened much gratified and affected at the fight; it feemed the throngest contrast with those they have to lately feen. M. Bertrand offered them money, which they would on no account accept, declaring that they were already paid for accompanying him in the only way they defired. After remaining a confiderable time, they took their leave, withing the lany and M. Bertrand all happinels.

I know no theory by which can be explained the dispositions of sensibility and ferocity, which from this narrative, appear in the same individua's, I repeat the facts as I have them from au. thority. They form a new inflance of the aftonishing variety, and even opposition of character to be found in that wonderful creature Man.

FROM THE PORT FOLIO. A merry long to a miscellaneous reader is often not less pleasant than a good sentiment. From the best and scarcest fources we derive sometimes a ballad to cheer him, who may he wea, ried with grave matter. The following homoroufly recounts the virtues of the favorite beverage of Hibernia.

CHATHAM, that elegant and highly improved feat on the banks of the Rappahannock River, directly opposite the town of Fredericksburg, con, taining about eleven hundred acres, four hundred of which are in wood, and valuable timber, the rest in cultivation, and pleasure grounds. The land in tillage is level, a considerable part of it has been highly manured, and the whole of it well adapted to the colture of grais, finall grain, and Indian corn, as the crop now growing will attest. The house and offices are of brick, and on a large and handsome scale, with a garden in front containing four acres, laid off with tafte and well planted with the choicest fruit trees, now in full bearing, and ernamented with forest trees and fhrubs of almost every description:-There is on the estate adjoining the river, a grift mill built of free stone, containing the modern machinery and two pair of Rones, one of them French Burrs-It commands a large country cuf. tom, is well fituated for merchant business, and has rented for five hundred dollars per annum ex. clusive of all the grain of the farm hopper free, which is equal to three hundred dollars more,-There are all necessary out houses, for either con. venience or luxury, fuch as ice-house, springhouse, barn, ftable, offices, &c. &c. With all these advantages and expensive improvements, this property is offered a at price which the lands - alone ought to command. There are also some valuable filheries, and quarries of free ftone on Alfo, a tract of land generally ealled Clark's, about two miles below Chatham, on the north bank of the Rappahannock river, and within view of the town of Fredericksburgh, containing upwards of four hundred acres. About one hundred and twenty acres of this tract is Rappahannock river bottom in cultivation, and is well a. dapted to Indian corn, small grain, &c. the refidue is in wood, furrounding a height, which furnishes a beautiful scite for building.

Alfo, a tract of land in Stafford county, ad--joining Stafford court house, containing upwards of twelve hundred acres. This is good farming land, and has feveral tenants on it.

Alfo, a tract of land in Westmoreland and Richmond counties, containing upwards of two thousand acres, on which there are also several tenants. These two last mentioned tracts of laud . Will be fold in imail tenements, or in entire tr as may best fuit the wishes of purchasers.

Alfo, a traft of land called Boyd's Hole, con. taining about one hundred and fifty acres, on the - banks of the Potomac, in King. George county, on which there are a comfortable dwelling house, fore and tobacco inspection ware house. Few fituations combine more advantages, it being an excellent fland for a flore, ferry and tavern, the two first of which are at present kept there. The -houses have lately been put in good repair, and the buildings alone will rent for three hundred dollars a year. The land is good in quality, and the figuation abounds in fifth, oyfters and wild Alfo, a valuable Scite for a Mill, with co acres of Land adjoining, in King George county, and not far distant from the last mentioned tract. There has been a mill here for many years which has lately gone to decay, the dam is substantial and entire, and the situation for a country mill not equalled in that neighborhood, commanding a very extensive custom; the land is covered with cedar, which alone senders it very valuable.

Alfo, several Lots and Houses in the town of Frederick fourgh.

To Planters and Farmers. The subscriber offers for fale, on a liberal oredit, or for NEGROES, Ten tracts of Land, of 1000 acres each, fituate on the river Outhers, and the Bafon of Berthelline, in the county of Oucheta, and territory of Orleans. The above land is part of the grant made to the Baron de Baftrop by the Spanish government. It is fituated above hity miles from the Natchez, 250 miles from New. Orleans, and 30 from the river Miffiffippi, and from 10 to 15 miles from the post of Oscheta. It is thought unnecessary to give more than a brief description of it, as any person withing for more articular information may obtain it from any of the following named gentlemen.

The above land lies on waters navigable in all feefens for veffels of 40 tons burthen, is in the heart of a country fall fettling from the M fiffippreterritory and Kentucky, and being but a few miles from the post renders it contiguous to mills, stores, cotton gins, &c. It is scarcely necessary to fay any thing of the quality of the foil, as the whole of that country is known to be the finest land in the world. It may not be improper to remark however, of these lands, that about one fil h being covered with timber, the rest is prairee, and nothing eife is required to prepare it for a crop of cotton, indian corn, tobacco, hemp, or rice, (in the lowest part of the grounds) than merely ploughing it up.

The fubscriber owns 5000 acres more, on which he would be glad of obtaining industrious ettlers. Such fettlers ought to have some ne. groes, and a plenry of children. To fuch he of fers liberal encouragement, either by felling to them at a low price, or on a long credit of 3 or 6 years, or leafe of 10 years. He would also furnish them with provisions on their arrival

For further particulars enquire of Thomas W. Griffith's and Thomas Chace, Efiquires, at Bal. timore; David P. Dew es, at Alexandria, Vir ginia; Dr. J. Scott, of Fredericksburgh; or of the subscriber at New Orleans, but at present in Phriadelphia.
